INTRODUCTION.

The earliest information we get as to Wakefield is derived, as in so many other cases, from Domesday Book. From it we learn that prior to the Conquest the manor had belonged to King Edward the Confessor, and was then in the hands of King William. It consisted of Wakefield itself; nine berewicks, namely, Sandal Magna, Sowerby, Warley, Feslei¹ (which is probably identical with Halifax), Midgeley, Wadsworth, Crosston, Longfield, and Stansfield; fourteen sokes, namely, Criggleston, West Bretton, Horbury, Ossett, Earlsheaton, Stanley, Shitlington, Emley, Cartworth, Kirkburton, Shepley, Shelley, Cumberworth, and Crosland; four other sokes, namely, Holme, Yateholme, Anstonley, and Quick, which were claimed to be thaneland; the soke of two manors in Normanton; and the manor of Dewsbury. In addition to all these, it is stated in the Claims that the church of S. Mary in Morley Wood [Woodkirk] also belonged to Wakefield; and in the Recapitulation that lands in Hipperholme, North Owram, Shelf, Stainland, Old Linley, Fixby, Rastrick, Eccleshill, Farnley, Ardsley, Greetland, and Hanging Heaton, were of the soke of Wakefield.

The Domesday Record also tells us that the manor belonged to King Edward "in demesne," and was then in King William's hands; yet the tenants of the manor do not seem to have had the privileges of "ancient demesne."

At an early date, not precisely ascertainable, Wakefield was granted by the Crown to one of the family of Warenne. It is generally stated that the recipient was William de Warenne, second Earl of Surrey. I have not met with any positive proof of this, but it seems probable. William de Warenne, generally considered Count of Warenne in Normandy, was one of Duke William's followers to England in 1066, and received in reward some 300 manors altogether. His Yorkshire holding was a comparatively small one, consisting of Conisbrough and its dependencies. He was created Earl of Surrey in 1088. He married Gundreda, whose parentage is still in dispute, and died in 1089.

His son William, second Earl of Surrey, was born circa 1071, and died in 1138. The first legal act by which it can be proved that the family [i.e. the Warennes] were seised of the manor of Wakefield with its dependencies, is the charter of William, the second Earl, by which he grants to God and S. Pancras of Lewes, the Churches of Conisbrough, Harthill, Fishlake, Hatfield, Little Sandal, Wakefield (with the Chapel of Horbury), Halifax, Dewsbury (with the Chapel of Hartshead), Burton and Sandal Magna. The names of the witnesses to the charter have not been preserved, and it cannot therefore be dated. But fortunately a charter of confirmation by Ralph, Archbishop of Canterbury, is in existence, dated 1121. For some reason which is not apparent this deed does not mention all the churches granted by the Earl's charter, but only those of Wakefield and Conisbrough.

We are thus able to say positively that the manor of Wakefield had been granted to the Warennes sometime prior to 1121.

Watson, in his Memoirs of the Earls of Warren and Surrey (i, 83), quoting from a MS. of Robert Nalson of Halifax, written about 1665, gives the date of this grant as 1116. This is probable enough, but as no original document is cited in support, the precise date must be considered doubtful.

William de Warenne, third Earl of Surrey, son and heir, born circa 1118, was killed while on the Crusade in 1148.

He left an only daughter and heiress, Isabel, who married William de Blois, third son of King Stephen, who was styled Earl Warenne, \textit{jure uxoris}. He died in 1159, without issue. His widow, the Countess Isabel, married, in 1164, Hamelin Plantagenet, illegitimate brother of Henry II, who was also styled Earl Warenne, \textit{jure uxoris}. The Countess died in 1199, and the Earl in 1202. They had issue William, the fifth Earl, who seems to have adopted his mother's name of Warenne.

Earl Hamelin is said to have granted to each of the free burgesses of Wakefield a toft containing one acre, to be held in free burgage at a rent of 6d a year, with liberty of free trade in all his lands in Yorkshire, and leave to take dead wood for fuel in his wood of Wakefield; for which they gave to himself, his Countess and his son, £7. [Watson, \textit{op. cit.}, i, 166.]

William de Warenne, fifth Earl of Surrey, son and heir of Isabel, was of age in 1202, when he had livery of his lands. He died in 1240.

In 1204 he obtained from King John the following charter:—

"John, etc. Know ye that we have granted, and by this our charter confirmed to our beloved and faithful William, Earl de Warenne, and his heirs, that they may have a certain fair every year at Wakefield, lasting for three days, namely, in the eve, the feast and the morrow of All Saints, but so that it shall not be to the damage of neighbouring fairs. Dated at Brug', March 15th, 5 John. [1204.]

John de Warenne, sixth Earl of Surrey, son and heir, was aged five years at his father's death.\textsuperscript{2} He was lord of the manor of Wakefield throughout the whole period covered by this volume.

Taking the part of the King in the Barons' War, he fought under Prince Edward at the Battle of Lewes, May 14th, 1264. After the defeat of the royal forces, he fled to France, and all his lands, except Lewes and Riegate, were handed over to Earl Gilbert of Gloucester. He returned in 1265, and took part in the Evesham campaign.

\footnote{1 Charter Roll, 5 John, m. 10; Ancient Deeds (P.R.O.), A, 354.}

\footnote{2 There is some doubt about this; two chronicles give 1231 as the date of his birth. See \textit{Dictionary of National Biography}.}
In 1269 he had a dispute with Henry de Lacy, Earl of Lincoln, respecting certain rights of pasturage. The situation of this pasture does not appear, but it is probable that it was in the neighbourhood of Wakefield, where their fees adjoined, and where, as these Rolls show, there was a considerable amount of rivalry and bickering. [See pp. 123, 144.]

In 1258, he obtained a grant of a second fair at Wakefield, as appears by the following charter:—"Henry, etc. Know that we have granted, and by this our charter confirmed to our beloved and faithful John de Warenne, that he and his heirs for ever may have a fair at his manor of Wakefield in the County of York, every year, lasting for three days, namely, in the eve, the day, and the morrow of the Nativity of S. John the Baptist, unless it shall be to the damage of neighbouring fairs. Dated at Oxford, June 19th, 42 Henry III [1258]."

The Hundred Rolls of 4 Edward I, 1276, give some interesting details of various abuses charged against the Earl and his officers.2

WAPENTAKE OF STRAFFORD.

"The same Richard [Richard de Heydon, the Earl's Steward] imprisoned Beatrice, widow of Gille the Tailor [ciisor] of Roderam, at Wakefield, for a whole year, because she imploaded the Earl about a tenement in Gresebrok [Greasbrough], and how she was delivered they know not. The same Richard has done devilish and numberless oppressions, as will appear in the roll touching ministers. [p. 109.]

WAPENTAKE OF MORLEY.

"They say that the Stewards of John de Warenne, Earl of Surrey, ever since the Battle of Evesham, have taken toll of things sold and bought, whereas they have no market there, and they still do this in the Earl's Liberty of Sourbyschir at the doors of sellers and buyers, and they call that toll "Dortol" and "Huctol." And if any persons in any way gainsay it, [the Stewards] immediately amerce them, and they do other things contrary to ancient custom, as more fully appears in the inquisition. [p. 127.]

"They say also that William de Warenne, Earl of Surrey, in the time of King Henry, father of the now King, appropriated to himself as forest, half the wood of Sothill, all the wood of Dewysbiry, and all the bounds of Halifax, Skirekotes, Ovenden, Haldewrth, Saltonestal, Migel' [Midgley], Wadewyrth, Heptonestal, Shalketonestal, Rutonestal, Stansfeld, and Langefeld, without warrant. And the said Earl of Surrey keeps up the said injury, and especially as to the wood of Dewysbiry, whereby the neighbours of another fee are amerced for escapes, at the will of the Earl's Steward. [Ibid.]

"They say also that Richard de Haydon, formerly the Steward of the said Earl of Surrey, and Thomas le Ragged, formerly Chief Forester, after the Battle of Evesham appropriated to him [the Earl] free chaces within the bounds of Sothill, Hiperum, Northouerum, Schipeden, Nortland, and Risewrd, without license. [Ibid.]

"They say also that Richard de Haydon, Steward of the Earl of Warenne, maliciously vexed Richard de Stanesfeld, and charged him with having harboured a certain felon, and extorted 10 marks from him. [p. 128.]

"They say also that John de Rafnesfeld, Serjeant [serviens] of the Earl of Warenne, took from William de Staynland 20s. of the debt of the Lord King Henry, and did not acquit him. [Ibid.]

"They say also that John de Rafnesfeld took from John son of Elias de Stansfeld half a mark of the debt of the Lord King Henry, and did not acquit him; and again half a mark, and again 6s. 6d. And also half a mark from John de Haldwrth, and did not acquit him. [Ibid.]

"They say also that John de Rafnesfeld took out of gaol Hugh le More of Gumereshale, an approver then in prison at Wakefeld, in order that he might indict good and true men, for the sake of gain.
They say also that neither the Earl of Warenne nor the Earl of Lincoln ought to keep an approver within his Liberty, nor any other person save the King, as they believe. [Ibid.]

"They say also that Richard de Haydon, Steward of John de Warenne, Earl of Surrey [and others], have taken rewards for performing their offices, for allowing robbers to escape. [Ibid.]

Wapentake of Agbrig.

"They say that the Earl of Lincoln and the Earl of Warenne have the return of writs and estreats; they believe that the Earl of Lincoln has enjoyed this from ancient times [ab antiquo], the Earl of Warenne for 40 years. And they say that the said Earls do not allow the King's Bailiffs to do any office in their lands, but they do all offices by their Bailiffs. [p. 132.]

"They say that the Bailiffs of the said Earls hold a Tourn once a year in the lands of their lords, and they amerce those who do not come at the summons, and they arrest those indicted at their Tourns. [Ibid.]

"Also the Bailiffs of the said Earls seize and retain waifs. [Ibid.]

"Also Richard de Hedon, Steward of the Earl of Warenne, caused one Adam de Gumersale at Wakefeld to appeal one Adam the Fuller, a true man, from whom he [Richard] took 20s. to be released on pledge until the next Tourn, when the said robber [Adam de Gumersale] said that he did not know the said Adam [the Fuller]. [Ibid.]

"They say also that the Bailiffs of the Earls of Lincoln and Warenne take many tolls unjustly, to the grievance of the whole neighbourhood, as appears in the inquisition." [p. 133.]

The interesting story of the Earl's spirited reply to some of the Quo warranto inquiries is well known, but is reprinted here in order to make the documentary evidence complete. It is given in the Chronicle of Walter de Heminburgh, or Hemingford, under the year 1279:—

1 Edition 1849, ii, 6, collated with the Abingdon Chronicle. Hearne's edition (1731) does not give it.
“Soon afterwards, the King disturbed certain of his great men, wishing to know by what warrant they held their lands, and if they had not a good warrant he immediately seized their lands. Amongst the rest, the Earl of Warenne was summoned before the King’s Justices, and, being asked by what warrant he held his lands, he produced in their midst a sword, old and rusty, and said, ‘Behold, my Lords, behold my warrant! For my ancestors, coming with William the Bastard, conquered their lands with the sword, and with the sword will I defend them from any one desiring to seize them. For the King did not conquer and subject the land by himself, but our forefathers were with him, partners and helpers!’ The other great men supported him and his answer, and they went away tumultuously, and displeased. But the King, when he heard the story, bethought himself, and relinquished his mistaken enterprise [ab incepto errore conquievit].”

Such is the legend, for, notwithstanding Hemingburgh’s character for accuracy, it cannot be called anything else. The Earl was certainly a violent man—witness his assault on Alan le Zouche within the precincts of Westminster Hall¹—and it is not at all unlikely that he made vigorous protest against what he doubtless deemed an impertinent infringement of the rights of private ownership. But it is quite certain that Edward did not relinquish his Quo warranto inquiries, and also that the Earl did appear and plead before the Commissioners in the various counties where his property was situated.

Most of the proceedings relating to him will be found in the volume printed by the old Record Commission in 1818, but the plea relating to the Yorkshire estates is not given. I have therefore transcribed it in full from the original Rolls.

and of spilling of blood, and waif, at Coningburg\(^1\); and likewise by what warrant he claims to have free warren and his lands quit from suit in Brampton and elsewhere in his lands, without license, etc.; and likewise by what warrant he has appropriated to himself as forest half the wood of Stothill,\(^2\) and the whole wood of Wesebyry,\(^3\) and all the bounds of Halifax, of Skircotes,\(^4\) of Houeden, of Haldeworth,\(^5\) of Saltonestall, of Migel', of Waddeworth,\(^6\) of Hertonestall,\(^7\) of Rutonestall, Stanefeld, and of Langefeld, and elsewhere in his lands, etc.; and likewise by what warrant he does not permit the King's Bailiffs to enter his lands to do their office without his [own] bailiffs and [in] their presence.

"The Earl comes, and says that he claims gallows at Coningburg and Wakefeld,\(^8\) and to do there such judgments as pertain to a gallows as to all his lands and fees, and says that he and all his ancestors have enjoyed the like from time immemorial.

"He claims also to have emends of bread and ale in the said manors, for this reason, that he has a market and a fair at Wakefeld from time immemorial. He has also another fair there by charter of King Henry, the father of the present King, which he produces, and which proves this.

"He claims also to take emends of bread and ale elsewhere throughout his whole land and fee, and to make judgment of transgressions of the assize at Wakefeld\(^8\) and Coningburg, and so he and all his ancestors have done from time immemorial.

"And as to the emends of other measures, he says that he claims to take the standard of all measures [clamat capere standardum omnium mensurarum] at Wakefield by delivery of the Marshals and Bailiffs of the King, and by that standard to deliver all measures in all his lands and fees, so, namely, that the King's Marshal and Bailiff on their coming may take emends there of all measures from those whom they may find transgressing, and after their departure [i.e. the King's Marshal or Bailiff], he [the Earl] and his bailiffs may make and take emends of measures until another coming of the King's Marshal or Bailiff; and he says that he and all his ancestors have so done from time immemorial.

"And as to the plea of namium vetitum, he says that he claims nothing.

"He claims also to have pleas of spilling of blood in the form of a simple trespass, namely, so that no appeal be made thereof, and so that in the plaint no mention be made of "against the peace of our Lord King"; and this he and all his ancestors have enjoyed from time immemorial.

"He claims also to have waif from the same time.

"And as to the quittance of suit, he says that he and all his ancestors from the same time were quit of suits as to all their lands and fees in that county which he has of ancient tenure.

"And as to Brampton, he vouches to warranty Philip de Vernell. Let him have him here on the Tuesday next after the feast of S. James.

"And as to the appropriation of the Forest, he says that he claims no Forest in the places aforesaid, but in truth he says that he and all his ancestors have had free chace in the underwritten places from time immemorial, as well in his fee as in his demesne lands, namely, in Wakefeld, Horbyry, Sandale, Crickeliston, Ossete, Gouthorp, Heton

King's Bailiffs, except those matters which pertain to the Crown; and as to this he puts himself on the country, etc.

"And Alan [de Walkyngham], who sues for the King, says that those liberties belong purely to the Crown, and that no long seisin or prescription of time ought to prejudice the King [and that the Earl has no special warrant for having those liberties,]\(^1\) and he craves judgment whether such seisin is sufficient warrant; and if the Court shall consider that such long seisin is sufficient warrant, then he claims for the King that inquiry may be made as to the manner of seisin [\textit{de modo seise}].

"And afterwards, on the Sunday three weeks from the Purification of Blessed Mary, in the 9th year of the present King \(1281\), came William de Beverl', who sued for the King, and also the said Earl. And the said William prayed that the said inquiry might be taken by knights or other proved and lawful men of the neighbourhood aforesaid, together with some of those who were at the Inquisition of the Ragemen [\textit{ad inquisitionem Ragemannorum}]\(^2\); and the Earl said precisely that none of those who were at the Inquisition of the Ragemen should ever put himself \(?)\ on the present inquiry. Therefore a day is given to them in Parliament five weeks after Easter."

In the Survey of 13 Edward I, 1284-5, generally known as "Kirkby's Inquest," we read—

"HAITFELD. Sir John, Earl of Warenne, holds Haitfeld, Stainford, Little Sandale and Cunynggesburgh, but does not say of whom, nor by what service."

Wakefield is not mentioned in this document.

\(^1\) The words in brackets are written partly on an erasure and partly interlined; they are not very clear in consequence.

\(^2\) The \textit{Placita de Regemanniis}, which are occasionally found on the Eyre Rolls, are the pleas taken under the Statute 4 Edward I, called the Statute of Rageman, which directed that Justices should go throughout the land to hear and determine all complaints and suits for trespasses committed within the 25 years then last past, as well by the King's Bailiffs and Officers as by others. In 1281 a commission of oyer and terminer was granted to inquire touching the persons who had broken the parks of John de Warenna, Earl of Surrey, at Wakefeud and Heitefeud, co. York, and had hunted there, and carried away deer. Two similar commissions were issued in 1290 with respect to the Earl's parks, free chaces and warrens in the County of York, from which deer, hares, rabbits and partridges had been taken.

Unfortunately, the Court Rolls are missing for both these years, so that we are unable to get any further particulars.

This is not the place for a biography of the Earl, about whom much might be written, but his doings in the war of Scottish independence must be touched upon, as references to it appear in these Rolls.

John Baliol, King of Scotland, having refused to appear before Edward I as his liege lord, and having entered England and besieged Carlisle, Edward raised an army, the command of which was given to John de Warenne. The Earl was entrusted with great powers. He was made Warden of all the sea coast (September 16th, 1295), Keeper of Bamborough Castle (October 6th), and he and Anthony de Bek, Bishop of Durham, were given custody of all counties north of the Trent, with power to compel all persons to take part in their defence (October 5th). On October 6th of the same year orders were sent to the Sheriffs of Yorkshire, Nottinghamshire, Derbyshire, Northumberland, Westmorland, Cumberland, and Lancashire, to cause all Knights of the Shire and two good men from every town to come before the Bishop and the Earl on the morrow of All Saints, to learn and perform their commands.

The decisive Battle of Dunbar was fought on April 27th, 1296, when Warenne was completely victorious, the Scotch losing, it is said, some 15,000 men.

On September 3rd, 1296, the Earl was appointed Keeper of the Realm and Land of Scotland, and was given almost regal authority.

The following item is of some local interest:—

"1296, October 13th. Mandate to John de Warenne, Earl of Surrey, to provide Gilbert de Grymesby, the King’s Clerk, who carried the Banner of St. John of Beverley to the King in Scotland, and by the King’s command remained there with it throughout the war, with a church in Scotland of the value of 20 marks or £20."

This intrusion of English priests into Scottish livings was one of the main factors of the subsequent revolt. Wallace raised the flag of independence, and soon had a considerable army. On June 24th, 1297, Warenne was ordered to select 90 men-at-arms in the counties beyond the Trent, to take with him to Scotland, "to do justice on the rebels and disturbers of the peace there, and to repress their malice." Wallace was victorious at the Battle of Stirling, September, 1297, and Warenne had to retreat over the border.

Edward raised a fresh army, of which the Earl was appointed Captain, and the campaign ended with the defeat of Wallace at the Battle of Falkirk, July, 1298.

These records complete the documentary history of the manor up to 1297, the date of the latest Roll here printed.

It has been thought best to leave all comment on the Court Rolls themselves for a subsequent volume. By this means a larger bulk of material will be in print for comparison, and more space will be available for editorial matter.

There is one point in the first Roll which requires some explanation. The word Ravensfield or Ravenfield constantly appears in the margin, as though it were the name of a Graveship.

At first I confess that I thought this had some reference to the manor of Ravenfield, near Rotherham, which also belonged to the Warennes. It appears, however, to indicate John de Ravenfield, the Serjeant of the Lordship,\(^1\) and is merely a catch-word to indicate that something has to be done by him. In the later Rolls the word serviens, i.e. serjeant, is used in the same way, but it has not been thought necessary to print this.

The Rolls have been copied by Miss Ethel Stokes, but her copy has been checked by the editor, who is therefore responsible for all errors.

Miss Stokes has also prepared the Index, a work of considerable difficulty, as to which a few words are necessary.

In indexing a collection of early names one troublesome point is constantly recurring. Take, for instance, Adam filius Willelmi de Sandal. How should this be translated, and how should it be indexed? It may be Adam Williamson, or Adam Williams, or Adam Fitz William, of Sandal, in which case Sandal is merely descriptive, and forms no part of the individual's name. Or again, it may be that Adam was the son of a person calling himself William de Sandal,\(^2\) in which case he should clearly be indexed under S.

\(^1\) See ante, p. ix.

\(^2\) Probably no Englishman ever called himself de anywhere, save in a Latin or French document. In an English document or in English speech, he would be of Sandal. This use of the word of, not as a description, but as part of a surname, continued until well into the fifteenth century, when both de and of were discontinued. A few families have revived the de in modern times.
The plan adopted here is as follows:—The form A. de B. is so translated, and is indexed under B.

The form A. filius W. de B., is translated A. son of W. de B., and is indexed under B.

But where a trade, office, nickname, or the like occurs first, then the de is translated of, and indexed accordingly. Thus Henry the Grave of B., John the Tinker of B., John le White of B. These would be indexed under Grave, Tinker and White, respectively. Where the form is A. de B. de C., the second de is translated of, and the individual is indexed under B. One exception has been made to this rule, and that is in the case of Sir William Fitz Thomas, a member of the family which subsequently adopted Fitz William as its surname. It may well be that in other cases the rule does not work quite accurately, but in the absence of any indication (as in the bulk of cases) it has been thought best to adopt a uniform plan.

The reader is cautioned that many persons appear under different names. Thus Henry the Grave of one year may be Henry something quite different another year. Children, too, do not always bear the same surname (if surname it can be called) as their fathers, and brothers may vary in a most puzzling way. The editor hopes to go more fully into this interesting subject in a future volume.

The thanks of the Society are due to the Countess of Yarborough for kind permission to have these Rolls transcribed and printed.

The thanks of the editor are due to Messrs. Stewart and Chalker, the Stewards of the Manor, and to Mr. Gascoigne and Mr. Milner, their clerks in charge of the Rolls, for much kindness and courtesy shown to him while at Wakefield.

Spenetum.—William the Clerk, plaintiff, Philip the Tailor [cissor] and Richard Swerd, defendants, in a plea of land, have a love-day, at their own request, until the next Court, saving [the Earl’s] right.

The inquisition ordered by Sir William de Rollesby upon the accounts:—

Philip the Mercer, William Yllewly, Robert son of Anot, Nel Hereward, Robert Albyn, Henry Hod, William de Morthyng, Robert del Heet, Richard at Kirk, William Pescy, Philip the Tailor, John Wytlof, Henry son of Robert, Robert Hereward, John Pollard, John son of William, Alcoke the Carpenter, Adam Hod, Hugh Fox, Henry le Restar, Philip de Uchethorp, Geoffrey son of Anot, John son of William de Stanley, and Richard Swerd, say upon their oath that they know nothing of the goods and chattels of John the Forester of Soureby, who was killed, and they do not know who has them, nor what has been done with them, nor who distributed them, so that the Earl may have his due of them. Therefore nothing is done in the matter.

And as to the names of those who ought to be put in exsight by William de Wakefeud, the clerk, and who, as he says, are in arrear for the pannage of the 52nd year, to the amount of £6 17s. 8d., as was ordered on the account taken by Sir William de Rollesby, they say that William the clerk, was the collector, furnisher, and accountant that year for the pannage, and collected the money for the pannage that year, which came to his hands, or the hands of those assigned by him, and not to any other; but what and how much [the moneys] were, they know not, on their oath.

As to the charges made against William the Parker by Richard Peny, they say that William pastured his oxen, cows, sheep and pigs, and his horses and those of others, namely, a horse of Baldwin de Seyville’s and another horse, in the said William’s acres in the park of Wakefeud; he also carried off dry wood from the said park by cart-loads, at his pleasure. Also that he took a certain part of a covy of partridges [?] in the field of Stanle, and did as he liked with them. He also took part of the fire-wood [?] in the aforesaid park, and distributed it at his pleasure. And to make the truth of these [charges] more certain, they say that the son of the Grave of Stanle took these things to the use of the said William. They say also that William killed a doe in the great wood at Wakefeud, and carried it to his house, and gave it to his wife when he married her again [?]; and they state this on the authority of Richard Peny, who was present with him at the time. They say that William promised a hide to Brother Silvester, then Preceptor of Newlands, and as he had not one in readiness, he crossed the park at Wakefeud towards Willewebyth in Thornes [Spinetum], and there killed a doe, and sent it to the said Brother, so that he might have the hide promised to him; and knowing and scheming, he wrongfully acquired it. [Brother Silvester?] refused it; whereupon William got angry, and caused the flesh with the hide to be carried to his own house, and there he distributed it at his pleasure.

They say also that the same William cut down two oaks in Wakefeud park after the coming of Thomas de Gardneroba, and that he had part of another oak, of which he made timber for his carts. He also took four heronsews¹ two years ago in Wakefeud park; this was presented by Walter son of Gerbot. William also promised a buck to Henry de Metheley's wife, and gave it; and he ordered Richard Peny, his servant, to feather an arrow so that it should not be recognised by anyone; and this he did with two grey goose feathers and one white one, and bound it with a white thread; this was presented by the said Richard Peny, in full Court.

They say also that the same William carried hay through the middle park and broke the park pale to do so; he also carried fern from the said park through the same opening.

William makes fine, as above, to be under surety until the Earl's coming.

son of Simon, Ivo de Soland, Hugh son of Alan, John de Northland, Henry de Halifax, Henry atte Ryding, Henry de Lythaseles, Alan son of Juliana, Richard del Pendant, Adam Migge, Jordan son of John, Richard del Dene, William del Holm, Henry [? brother of] Hanecok, Roger son of Robert, Adam de Warlowele, and Hugh son of Matthew; who say on their oath that John de Migeley, who is charged with taking a stag, as appears at the Court at Wakefield, is quit thereof, because he took nothing, but is in all things a good and true man towards the Earl and all others. And [they say] that it is rather to the Earl's profit than not that the said John should hold certain land near the Forest, at Haderschel, because he keeps the Earl's Forest as well as he is able, being the Forester.

The said John was charged that he ought to have received four oxen and 16 sheep, the chattels of Hugh de Barkeshere, a fugitive. [The jury] say on their oath that he was not able to have any part of those chattels because the King's Coroner claimed them for the King's use, by an inquisition.

They say on their oath that Philip le Waley and Alan del Rodes, who are charged with taking a stag and a kid, are not guilty, but are in all things true men towards the Earl and all others. Therefore they go quit.

They say also that John de Asberne, a man of Stephen le Waley, and Hulle, a man of Thomas de Thorneton, took a stag in the Forest of Soureby. And thereupon came Adam, the son of Thomas de Holgate, and found them skinning the stag; and Adam had a part of it, but they know not what portion. It is therefore considered that the said John and Hulle are to be arrested by their bodies, if they can be found within the Earl's liberty; and that the body of Adam son of Thomas de Holgate, who had part of it, be committed to the Earl's prison. He gives 40s. to be under the surety of John de Miggeley, Adam de Waddiswrth, and Nalke de Heptonstall, and is altogether quit.

They say also that all the foresters of Sourebyschire, who are charged with very many offences in the Forest, such as hunting, vert, and allowing pigs in the Forest for moneys of which the Earl gets no part, are altogether quit, because they are in all things good and true men towards the Earl and all others, and keep their bailiwick well in all respects.

They say also that the said foresters, who were charged with having taken 16s. to conceal complaints, fines and attachments, are altogether quit of taking moneys and of concealing complaints and attachments; for they took nothing in that respect, and it was presented against them through the hate of their enemies.

RASTRIK.—The inquisition between John son of Hugh de Rastrik, claimant, and Adam le Melemakere, defendant, in a plea of land, comes by the township of Rastrik; [the jurors] say on their oath that John demised the said land to Adam for a term of 10 years. It is therefore considered that Adam do hold the land in peace until the end of his term, and that John be amerced 2s.

Sarah daughter of John de Honeley gives 12d. as a relief for the land of her father, doing service and customs therefor.

SOUREBY.—The above inquisition of Soureby says concerning John de Miggeley, who is charged with four cart-loads of boards, taken in the Forest of Soureby, and made from the Earl's wood without buying it or having license of any Bailiff, that he had the boards from a certain dead tree, blown down by the wind, of the gift of Thomas le Ragged and of the gift and grant of Thomas de Garderobe. Let him therefore go quit.

The above inquisition of Sourebyschyre—as to two oxen, which were missing from the stock of Sourebyschire, and five calves, which were concealed out of the increase of 55 [Henry III, 1270-1], and which are now found to be cows; and as to two calves concealed in 56 [Henry III, 1271-2], and which are now found to be one a bullock and the other a heifer, aged two years and a half; and as to 14 calves concealed out of the increase of 1 Edward [1272-3], and which are now found to be bullocks and 3 young heifers, aged a year and a half; and also as to how many calves there were of the increase of 2 Edward [1273-4], whereof the keepers have answered in the accounts for 41 calves of the stock proper and for 12 from the cows of Sothyll;—says that they were concealed through the ignorance of the keepers and of their clerks, because they did not know how to describe the ages [of the calves], and not through the malice or fraud of the keepers. Therefore let them go quit. By order of William de Rollesby.

He came in full Court, before the Steward and before John de Horbiry, the King's Coroner, and all the suitors of the Court, and confessed it with his own lips. Therefore let him be hanged.

Wakefeud.—Clement the Clerk against John le Roller in a plea touching a certain meadow. John did not come at this Court, nor at the four preceding Courts. He is therefore to be distrained to make fine for his defaults, and also to answer Clement in his plea.

SANDALE.—John Stel complains of Thomas son of John de Langefeld, in a plea of robbery; pledge, Ralph Feldefare. [Thomas] is attached by his body, and imprisoned. The plaintiff says that Thomas took from him a bay horse (he knows not by what warrant or by whose order), also 15d. worth of cloth from his daughter, half a lump of iron, a saddle and a bit; but he does not name the price of anything except the iron. Thomas denies it, and craves judgment because John did not name his proper name, nor the day, nor the hour, nor the words which belong to the Court. Thomas therefore goes quit, and John must go to prison for his false complaint. He made fine of 6s. 8d.; pledge, Ralph Feldefare.

BARONY.—John de Wilehuses finds a pledge, Roger de Heyleye, for his acquitting himself before the Steward at Pontefract, and before Peter de Santon, the Steward of Pontefract, on a charge of putting three pigs in the great wood to steal the Earl's pannage; he states that they escaped into the wood without his knowledge. Respite until a day [? to be appointed], before the Steward of Pontefract.

SPINETUM.—William Prudfot withdraws from his complaint against Thomas Pegere, and Philip de Mora. Fine 2s.; pledge, John son of Nalle.

1 It is not clear whose name is referred to, but presumably it was the defendant's. The misnaming of a defendant in the minutest particular was sufficient to vitiate the whole proceedings.

2 This probably means that a charge of robbery was not within the jurisdiction of the Court. See a similar defence by John de Eland, ante, p. 60.

The inquisition as to a bovate of land which Margery Stute [?] and her sister claim against Adam de Lictheseles, comes by William the Grave of Soureby, Seyer de Soureby [de eadem], John de Nuteschawe, Robert son of Roger, William son of Thomas, Ivo de Soland, Philip le Waley, Matthew son of Cicely, Ivo de Werloweley, Jordan son of John, John the Smith, and Henry de Licheseles, who say on their oath that one William the Gardener took that bovate from the Steward in open Court, and he held it for days and years, and afterwards allowed it to become waste for a long time, and the service due for it to get into arrears; afterwards, when summoned to pay the arrears of service due, he neither came nor paid; and so the Steward then in open Court demised the bovate to Adam de Lictheseles, he doing service and customs. Sir William FitzThomas has respite for doing suit of Court, by the Earl, until, etc.

1 This seems to be the meaning of de villenagio, inasmuch as at a subsequent Court, p. 45, the hedge is referred to as Thomas’s.

2 Page 31.
Hyperum.—Three perches of free land and one perch of villeinland, which were Richard de Coppeley's, are taken into the Earl's hands until some one shall speak for it.

Thomas son of Richard de Coppele admits that he has no share in a stray mare with her foal [?] found at Hyperum, nor [has] Thomas son of Thomas de Coppele [de eadem], who claimed [?] them by [?a jury of] the neighbourhood.¹ They are therefore to be sent to Wakefield, and taken into the Earl's hands as strays. Thomas son of Thomas afterwards comes, and gives 2s. to have them back, in peace and quit.

COURT at Rastrik on the Monday after Ascension Day [May 23rd], in the year aforesaid [1275], and in the time of the said [Steward].

Hyperum.—John son of Alice de Hyperum, complains of Thomas son of Richard de Coppeley, for trespass; and because they settled it, they are both in mercy. John finds Richard son of Emma as pledge; he made fine of 12d. Thomas's pledge, Ivo de Werloley; he made fine of 2s.

²Richard de Houerum is in mercy for attending an inquisition without license, wherefore he was not sworn; pledge, Simon de Bothes; fine 12d.

Roger de Hyperum complains of Thomas son of Richard de Coppele, for assault. It is found by an inquisition of the township of Northouerum that Thomas did insult him with evil words, calling him idle and a robber, because the hedge of his [?Roger's] court was defective so that the neighbours' cattle pastured in his [?Thomas's] corn. Thomas is therefore in mercy; pledge, John de Haldewrth; fine 2s.

Thomas son of Richard de Coppeley complains of Roger de Hyperum in a plea of agreement, and says that he arranged with him in the presence of many persons to satisfy Roger as to all trespasses charged against him, Thomas, and this by the opinion of the neighbours; and Thomas found pledges for the faithful performance thereof, and Roger gave security and found the Earl's Bailiff as ¹ The text of this entry is very obscure. This clause as to Thomas son of Thomas may be the statement of Thomas son of Richard; or possibly the word venit is omitted, in which case the meaning would be that Thomas son of Thomas, who was stated by the neighbours to be the owner, did not come to claim them.

pledge. Roger comes and admits that he received pledge from Thomas as to accepting amends from him, as aforesaid. Roger is therefore in mercy; pledge, Simon de Bothes; fine 12d.

John son of Richard complains of William de Langefeud, the Earl's Serjeant [or servant], and gives 6d. to have an inquisition whether William took his neighbour's goose feathers [?] to his house in his despite, and whether he drove his, John's, wife and son, aged six months, from his house, or not. The inquisition comes by the township of Northouerum, and says that, so far as they know, William never entered John's house, nor turned out his wife and child, but he did strike John with his hand on account of ill and insulting words used between them. John is therefore in mercy for a false complaint; pledge, Simon de Bothes; fine 12d. William is also in mercy for the assault; pledge, John le Barn'; the fine is pardoned.

William son of Adam, complains of Hudde son of Henry de Stanclif, for trespass, and says that at Christmas last year he came to his house and carried off wood from his barn, which had been blown down by the wind; he claims 20s. damages. Hugh denies it, and they put themselves on an inquisition. The inquisition comes by the township of Northouerum, and says that the said Henry1 did take wood from William's house and without his leave, as he said, but2 that the wood is only worth a farthing, and that William has received no damage. William is therefore in mercy for a false complaint; pledge, Simon the Grave of Bothes3; fine 6d. Hudde is also in mercy for taking the wood; pledge, Richard son of Richard; fine 12d.

Richard son of John del Brickhouses, is in mercy for throwing down an oak in the wood of the Abbat of Fonteyns near the grange [or barn] at Bradeley, which he confessed with his own lips; pledge, John, his father; fine 12d.

Henry de Lache of the same, 12d. for the like; pledge, John de Lache [de eadem].

Bate de Halifax, 12d. for the escape of 12 sheep [bidentes]; pledge, John the Grave.

1 Sic. Perhaps a clerical error. 2 Page 33. 3 It seems almost certain that this is the same person as the "Simon de Bothes" mentioned above.
William Drake, 12d. for vert; pledge, Thomas de Coppele.
John son of Jordan, 12d. for the like; pledge, Jordan Coleman.
Henry del Rode, 12d. for the like; pledge, John de Horton.
Elias de Schelf complains of Richard de Presteley, his brother, in a plea of land and debt; pledge, Thomas son of Richard de Coppele; and he gives 12d. to have an inquisition, which is ordered for the next Court.

TOURN there the same day.

The Jury of Hyperum:—Robert del Stokkis, John de Locwode, Richard de Hyperum, John de Querneby, Henry de Dalton, William de Bradeley, Henry le Fraunceys of Staynland, Adam de Northouerum, Jordan del Rokis, Alan de Fekesby, Gilbert le Dyne, Adam de Mallesheved, and John son of Hugh de Rastrik.

1 Hyperum.—They say on their oath that Peter del Scoles gave 6d. to William de Langefeu, the Earl's Serjeant, who had charged him with larceny, and they say that Peter is good and true in all things. Therefore, etc.

They say also that William del Gledehul gave 12d. to the same William de Langefeu to have peace with him. Therefore, etc.

They say also that Elias del Gren had a stray sheep in his keeping for a year and more, by the view of Simon the Grave; and afterwards William de Langefeu came and took it; and first he sold the skin of the sheep, and afterwards he sold the sheep itself to Thomas the Webster of Hyperum, but they know not for what price.

They say also that the said William de Langefeu came to the towns of Staynland and Barkesland, and claimed an aid and money from the men of those towns, because he [?] was in contumely and error for a certain fine against Robert Bulle of Wakefeud, but they know not the amount.

They say also that the said William carried two pillows, an iron candlestick, and an iron tang [?] from the home of Avice, wife of Adam de Dalton, but they know not where he took them to, nor their value. He is therefore in mercy, and made fine of 2s.; pledges, William de Langefeu and John de Ravenesfeud.

2 It seems probable that the usual in mercy clause is intended here. The first five entries are all presentments against William de Langefeu, and the fine of 2s. recorded at the end of the fifth, no doubt covers them all.
3 The meaning of this is not very clear. The fine referred to does not appear to be entered on this Roll.
4 Auriculacles: French, oreiller.
Ravenesfeud.—They say also that Philip de Fresley raised a bank in their common, where there was none before. It is ordered that the bank be pulled down, and that Philip be distrained to make fine for his amercement. See below in this Court.

They also say that the house of Henry son of Thomas de Schelf was burgled by night, and that Henry raised the hue; and the townships came, and followed up the hue to the boundary of the Earl's fee and into another fee. So nothing was done in the matter.

Hyperum.—They say also that Richard son of Henry de Northouerum, diverted a footpath, leading towards the church, from his own land on to the land of Adam de Northouerum. It is ordered that the footpath be put back into its proper place, and that Richard be in mercy. He made fine of 2s.

They say also that Jordan son of Henry, moved his fence beyond its proper place, and appropriated to himself land of the Earl's. It is ordered that the fence be pulled down, and that Jordan be in mercy. He made fine of 12d.

Also, that Simon the Grave moved his fence, and appropriated to himself land of the Earl's. It is ordered that the fence be pulled down, and that Simon be in mercy. He made fine of 6s. 8d.

They say also that Hugh de Stanclif and Henry his brother have done the like. The like order is made. They made fine of 12d.

They say also that the men of Hovirschelf made a footpath towards the church, in the Brecreforlong, where there was none before. It is ordered that the footpath be stopped, and that they be in mercy for the trespass. They made fine of 4s.

They say also that Henry de Totil went away from the Earl's land, and dwells in Horton, on the land of the Abbat of Fountains, in the fee of Sir Henry de Lascy. It is ordered that he be arrested, if found within the Earl's liberty.

They say also that Thomas de Thoung went away from the Earl's land, and dwells at Helaund, without license. The like order is made.

They also say that Bate del Bothes, the Earl's villein, went away from the Earl's land without license, and dwells at Haldewrth. The like order is made.

Thomas Wyndelester, 12d. for not coming.

Agnes de Litheseles, dwelling in Hartesheved, 6d. for brewing contrary to the assize.

1 Compare the similar case of a thorailium on p. 38.

2 Page 35.
Robert Bate, 6d., for brewing and selling contrary to the assize.
Maude de Crosland, 6d., Henry le Fraunceys, 6d., Thomas del Rode, 6d., and Hugh de Suthclif, 6d., for the like.
The township of Eckleleshull is in mercy for not coming. It had no complaint at the Tourn at Wakefeud.

Defaults.—John de Eland, William de Marton, and William de Ecclessey did not come. They are to be distrained to make fine therefor.

Ravenesfeud.—Philip de Frechley for his contempt and despite this day in open Court before the Steward, and because he wished to contradict the Steward's order, finds these pledges to make amends to the Earl, namely, William de Trimmingham and William de Ecclesley. He made fine of 6s. 8d.

Rastrik.—Richard del Wode of Rastrik was elected Grave, to keep his Graveship faithfully, and to make attachments and presentments.

¹ Memorandum as to timber. There remained at Rastrik on the retirement of Master Richard the Carpenter, in the third year of King Edward, by a tally made with the Grave, 67 pieces of wood, both great and small.

COURT at Halifax, on the Tuesday before Ascension Day [May 23rd], in the year aforesaid [1275], and in the time of the said [Steward].

Soureby.—Ivo son of Alan de Sourby, gives 2s. for license to take 3 acres in Werlole from Thomas son of Ivett, to hold to Ivo and his heirs for ever after the death of Thomas, doing service and customs; pledges, William the Grave and Richard son of John.

Elias the Tinker of Sourby, in order to be under the protection of the Earl, gives 2s. on coming in, and is to pay 12d. a year henceforward on Ascension Day; pledge, William the Grave.

The inquisition taken to inquire as to the offenders in the Earl's forest in Sourbyschire, and also touching an arrow found in a hind, who drew the arrow, or owned it, or carried it—comes by the townships of Soland and Richewrth, and says on oath that they know of no offender of this kind in the neighbourhood, nor in the forest nor in any other place, nor who drew the arrow, nor do they recognise it. Therefore nothing is done.

Richard de Barm' gives 4s. for license to take 8 acres of land in Barm' from Agnes daughter of William son of John, doing service and customs; pledge, John the Grave.

Thomas son of Richard de Coppeley, gives 12d. for license to take a rood of land with a barn in Hyperum, from Thomas son of Thomas, doing service and customs; pledge, William de Astey.

1 The same Thomas son of Richard de Coppeley, is in mercy for a license of concord with the said Thomas in a plea of trespass; pledge, John the Grave; he made fine of 12d. 2

SOURBY.—Maude wife of William Brun complains of Pouwe, and says that her husband made an agreement with him to the effect that Pouwe dimised and sold to William for ever a bovate of land with a garden and a stubbing3; after the agreement was made, Pouwe came and threw down the stubbing, and carried it away, and also dug up and carried away encaṣ4 in the garden, unjustly. Pouwe denies the whole of it, and they put themselves on an inquisition. The inquisition comes by the townships of Sourby and Soland, and says that an agreement between William and Pouwe was in fact made, as stated, but that Pouwe was to have the stubbing for two years after the date of the agreement, so that he might fairly take it down and carry it away. Maude is therefore in mercy for a false claim; pledge, William the Grave; fine 6d.

The inquisition also says that Pouwe did enter Maude's yard,5 unjustly and contrary to the agreement, and there he cut down and threw down her encaṣ, by which she suffered serious damage. He is therefore in mercy; pledge, William the Grave; fine 6d.

1 Page 37. 2 They had probably compromised the suit without license.
3 This word does not occur in the dictionaries. The text suggests an erection, perhaps a shed.
4 I am quite unable to translate this word. The mention of digging suggests a plant or tree of some kind.
5 Called "garden" above.
KASTRIK.—Jordan son of Robert de Saltthwayth, gives 13s. 4d. to be under the protection of the Earl and bailiffs as to his land, paying 6d. a year at the three terms usual on the Earl’s land; pledge, Robert de Salttheweyt, living at Querneby.

2 Translation doubtful. Virga has various meanings, but ‘ring’ seems the most likely here.
Sourby.—Also that Simon de Bothes holds a field without a fence, which is a nuisance to the neighbours, as he impounds their cattle there, and therefore they consider that he is levying a new toll and customs. He is ordered to make a fence, as his neighbours have done, and is in mercy for the trespass; fine 2s.

COURT at Birton on the Monday before Pentecost [June 2nd], in the year aforesaid [1275], and in the time of the said [Steward].

Holne.—The inquisition1 between Robert son of Cicely and Emma daughter of Thomas de Eppewrth, his wife, plaintiffs, and Robert son of Mary, defendant, concerning half a bovate of land in Heppewrth, comes by Hugh de Wlvedale, Robert of the Chapel, Adam son of Richard del Scoles, Simon de Heppewrth, Thomas son of Elias, Robert son of Adam, Thomas de Cartewrth, Geoffrey de Litelwode, John son of Geoffrey, Nicholas de Litelwode, Brun de Holne, Benedict de Holne [de eadem], William de Litelwode, Hudde son of Alice, William Morsel, Gamel de Alstanley, Hugh son of Robert, Thomas son of Daniel, Robert Brun, Nicholas de Thoun, Adam son of John, Lovekoc de Wlvedale, Adam de Wlvedale [de eadem], Henry del Grene, Richard Wadlok1, Richard del Birkes, Matthew del More, William de Buterle, Roger de Buterle [de eadem], John de Fouleston, Adam de Almanbiry, Adam de Eldwardholes, Richard de Horn, Simon son of Adam, Warin de Heppewrth, John son of Gilbert, Henry de Quickeleden, Adam de Hodresfeld, Thomas son of Sarah de Fouleston, John son of Annabel de Fouleston [de eadem], and John de Heldwardholes, who say upon their oath that Robert son of Mary, who now holds that land, has more right to it than Emma and Robert, the claimants. They say that one William son of Soignif, had two sons, Richard, the ancestor of Robert son of Mary, and Thomas, the ancestor of Emma, and Thomas was the firstborn. And William son of Soignif had two bovates of land, and in open Court he granted one bovate to Thomas, his firstborn son, and the other to Richard, his younger son, with Thomas's consent. And after the death of William, their father, the said Thomas and Richard came in open Court, and paid 16s. as a relief for the said two bovates of land2; and the Steward, holding a rod in his hand, of which one end was black and the other white, gave seisin to Richard with the white end, because he was fair in colour, and gave seisin to Thomas with the black end. And because the Steward perceived that Richard was yet within age, and that he could not hold or keep3 the land, appointed that Richard should be under the guardianship of his brother Thomas, until he came of full age, and that Thomas should keep Richard's land, as well as his own, until Richard should come of age, and that Thomas should then give up to Richard the land which his father had given him, without any contradiction or hindrance. In the meantime Thomas, who was the father of Emma, the claimant, died, and he had no other right in that land except as has been stated. Wherefore Emma and Robert, her husband, cannot claim any right. It is therefore ordered that Robert son of Mary, who is the successor of Richard, may hold the land as he held it before, and may have full seisin thereof, well and in peace, doing services, etc., as he did before, and that Robert son of Cicely and Emma, his wife, be in mercy for a false claim, pledges, John del Scoles, Nicholas del Clif, and John son of Gilbert. [Their fine] is pardoned because they are poor, and because they gave permission to have the inquisition.

3 This clearly refers to his physical capacity; infancy was no bar to "holding" in the legal sense.

And Alice, mother of the said Emma, who unjustly claimed dower in the said land after the death of Thomas, her husband, is in mercy, because she has no right, except as aforesaid; pledge, Warin de Eppewrth. Fine 12d.

HOLNE.—Herbert de Butterley, complaining of Richard son of William de Fouleston, says that he illtreated him, beating him, and wounding him in the head with an axe, thereby drawing blood, as could be plainly seen. They have a love-day and license of concord, at their own request, saving the lord's rights. Richard comes and puts himself in mercy; pledge, Gamel de Alstanley. Fine 4s.

Agnes de Hoverthoung gives 12d. to have an inquisition to inquire whether she has any right to a barn and half a toft, which Adam Prudfot holds, or not. Ordered for the next Court. Pledge, William de Alstanley.

1 Page 42.
Holne.—Jordan Schaward, 6d. for a cow escaped; pledge, Alexander de Wlvedale.
William Kenbod', 12d. for 4 beasts escaped; pledge, William de Buterle.
Lovecok son of Agnes de Schepele, 12d. for a mare; pledge, John de Fouleston.
Herbert de Buterle, 2s. for vert.
Geppe de Litelwode, 12d. for cutting broom [hussetus] in Cartewrth.
Hugh de Litelwode gives 4s. for license to take 3½ acres of land from John de Litelwode, doing service and customs; pledge, Richard Brun, the Grave.

TOURN there the same day.

Twelve jurors: William de Thorniceley, Robert de Wlveyro, William de Birton, Adam de Helay, Richard de Brocholis, Adam de Wodehuses, Thomas son of John de Fouleston, Adam the Forester of Eppewrth, Richard the Grave of Scoles, John son of Mary de Wlvedale, Hugh de Litelwode, and John son of Robert de Holne.

They say on their oath that on Quadragesima Sunday this year, a house in the town of Schelfley was burgled by four robbers, and goods were carried off. The hue was raised, and followed up to the bounds of the Earl's liberty, by four townships. They do not know who [the robbers] were. Therefore nothing is done.

They say also that Richard del Rodes is a clerk, and the Earl's villein, inasmuch as his father, Serlo de Ossete by name, was the Earl's native; yet he holds himself for a free man because he took free land with his wife in marriage, and with a part of that land he has now endowed his daughter. He has a day at the next Court to answer this or to make fine.

They say also that Matthew de Stordes unjustly impounded the cattle of the men of Birton, on the high way. He is therefore in mercy. Fine 2s.

1 They say also that John the Miller took some bran in a sieve from the bran of Hugh de Litelwode at Cartewrth mill, and Hugh himself, who was one of the tithing-men [?], testifies to it. John is to be arrested if he can be found. He was not found.

1 Page 43.
They also say that Peter Brun killed a foal belonging to John de Schepley in Emley Park, while he was servant to Sir William Fitz Thomas, and afterwards Sir William's dogs eat it. He must pay John his damages, and is in mercy for the trespass; pledges, Robert Crab of Birton, Richard son of Henry, Adam de Heleys, and Thomas son of Christiana. He made fine.

They also say that Parnell Blome brewed contrary to the assize. She is therefore in mercy. The fine is pardoned because she is poor.

HOLNE.—Richard the Clerk's wife, 6d. for the like.

RAVENESFEUD.—And because they [the jurors] presented nothing else, although the townships presented to them the defaults of those who did not come to the Tourn, as appears below, and also concerning some measures found and proved to be false, therefore all the jurors are in mercy. They made fine of 13s. 4d.

HOLNE.—Fines for not coming:—Richard del Rode, 12d.; Richard de Cartewrth, 12d.; Adam de Cartewrth, 12d.; Adam Strekeys, 12d.; Adam Prudfote, 12d.; John Mour', 12d.

Thomas son of Elias, is in mercy for taking land for a term [of years] without license of the Court. Fine 12d.

Matthew de Mora, 6d. for the like.

Agnes de Hoverthoung complains of Adam Prudfote touching a certain barn, of which he deforces her unjustly, inasmuch as William her brother, whose heir she is, died vested and seised thereof. Adam denies it, and they put themselves on an inquisition of the neighbourhood of the townships of Holne, Alstanley and Thoung. The inquisition says that one Jordan sold 4½ acres with a barn and a toft to William, Agnes's brother, for 14s.; and when they came to the Earl's Court, Jordan denied the sale, and refused to surrender more than the 4½ acres, and William accepted seisin thereof, without the barn and the toft. And a long time afterwards, Jordan wished in his necessity to sell his land [he came to the Tourn, entered into the barn with the toft, and held them all his life without license, which he remised], and surrendered 2½ acres of land, together with the barn and the toft in question, to Adam Prudfote, and Adam took a full surrender of the same in open Court, and in this way held the 2\ 1/2 acres of land and the barn and toft, and not otherwise. It is considered that Adam do hold his said land, with the barn and toft, inasmuch as he and no other took seisin thereof in Court, and that Agnes be in mercy for a false claim; pledge, Adam Prudfote. Fine 12d., which was paid by the said Adam.¹

William comes and denies the force, etc., and says that he holds nothing of Richard in that essart for which he ought to pay the rent of 2d. and 6d., as Richard says, and denies the rest of it, word by word. He must therefore wage his law; pledges of the law, Peter de Bretton and Luvecok de Bretton [de eadem], who are also pledges for William's good behaviour towards Richard de Bretton and his son. Richard finds Henry de Bir' as pledge for his good behaviour against William and all others.

Who say that Richard Pykard was killed in the town of Normanton at Christmas last, they know not by whom, but as Robert son of Adam Wymes of Staynford was standing near Richard at the time, he ought to answer it. Therefore let him be arrested.

They say also that a stray heifer was in Walton from the day of S. Peter ad vincula [August ist] until Christmas, and then Richard Pykard and Alkoc his servant seized it and took it away, without the license of the bailiff or of any other, to the town of Normanton; what afterwards became of it they do not know. Therefore let Alkoc be arrested.

They say also that the Parson of Hemmeley obstructed the high way leading through the middle of his courtyard, recently and unjustly, and to the damage of the neighbourhood, which is well testified by the neighbours. Therefore let him be distrained.

Therefore nothing is done.

Alverthorpe.—They say also that Agnes Kaynel has a key made to open and shut the doors of the neighbours, and she deceives the neighbours' children, and takes from them whole loaves,2 barley and oats, to their serious damage. Therefore let her be arrested. She was not found.

\(^1\) Attinentum; see note 2, p. 81.

\(^2\) She was probably cohabiting with some man, or possibly married. The text does not mean, as might perhaps be thought, that a female native could legally be deflowered by obtaining a license. Stipata is probably an error for stuprata.

\(^3\) Page 51.
Ossete.—They say also that Jordan son of Robert de Goukethorpe, and Robert his brother, are the Earl’s natives, and that they live in Roudeclif and Snayth. Therefore let them be arrested, if found.

1 A native or serf could not be ordained without his lord's license. The Canons of the Church, moreover, made servile birth a disqualification for Holy Orders. See Constitutions of Otho, ed. 1679, p. 16.

1 Page 56.

Ravenesfeud.—Thomas the servant [garcio] of Thomas de Coppeley against Peter son of Alice de Hyperum, says that a fortnight ago this day, in Wakefield market, where many were playing at throwing the stone, 1 a quarrel arose among them; and thereupon came Peter with a drawn knife, and wounded the plaintiff in the head; he claims 6s. 8d. for the damage and 6s. 8d. for the affront, and produces suit thereof.

1 Evidently a game of some sort; perhaps putting the weight, or possibly "duck-stones."

2 Page 57.

3 The expression non est advocatus is one of some difficulty. Serjeant Pulling (Order of the Coif, p. 7) considers that it means one not duly qualified by legal training to act as advocate. But it may be doubted whether at this early date the "advocate" was sufficiently differentiated from the "attorney" to warrant this suggestion. It is well known that non-professional attorneys were permitted as late as the reign of James I. See also Reeves' History of English Law, II, p. 228.
came upon him in a house in the town of Waddeswrth, and [broke] the doors, and entered therein, and beat him, and drew blood from him, and dragged him from his bed, naked save for his shirt and breeches, and when he fled from them they chased him to a wood near the said town on the south side, and pelted him with stones, until through the darkness of the night he escaped them; and they kept among them his belt, worth 2d., his boots, worth 8d., and his hose, worth 4d.; he claims 39s. damages, and 13s. 4d. for the affront, and he produced suit thereof. Afterwards all the defendants came save John Momil, and denied the injury and the breach of the Earl’s peace and any kind of violence, and everything which he charged against them, against him and his suit. William says that the defence was not sufficient, because they began to disclaim word by word, but said nothing as to the damages and losses; and upon this he claims judgment. The judgment is respited until the next Court.

RAVENESFEUD.—Order to distrain John de Heland and William de Marton to make fine for their defaults in not coming to the Tourn at Rastric.

Order to distrain the whole township of Walton to answer before the Steward at the next Court for a stray bullock which was among them from the feast of S. Giles until Christmas, and was afterwards sent away by them, into whosesoever hands it shall have come.

1 SPINETUM.—The township of Thornes [Spinetum] and the others who pastured their cattle in the Earl’s meadow after the hay was carried, have respite until the Earl’s coming into those parts.

RAVENESFEUD.—John de Heland, who made default at the last Court, came and put himself in mercy at the will of the Steward. It is condoned.

There was a “pluries” order2 to distrain Sir John de Heton to make fine for his defaults. At length came Baldwin de Ceyville [Saville] and Mathew the Grave of Sothill, and undertook that John before the next Court should bring in 4 oxen and 2 horses, or make fine for them, if so be that he could have speech with the Steward in the meantime.

2 That is, a third order; the first simply orders the distrain (or whatever it is); the second orders the like, sicut prius; and the third, sicut pluries.

Robert son of Adam Wymes of Staynford is to be arrested to confess the truth as to the death of Richard Pykard, as appears at the Tourn at the last Court, if he can be found. He was not found, so nothing was done.

The Granger of Bradley still has respite for making fine for his defaults, because he is on the Earl's service.

John de Querneby offered himself to wage his law against the Earl, touching a trespass charged against him, as appears before. Respited until the next Court.

Alvirthorpe.—Philip de Alvirthorpe gives 13s. 4d. for license of concord with William de Loppesheved in a plea of a bovate of land in Thornes [Spinetum], as appears above; the land is to remain to Philip and his heirs for ever, discharged from any claim by William and Alice his wife or their heirs; Philip is to do services and customs, and is to have seisin in consideration of the above payment. ---

1 See note 1, p. 109.
2 Page 61.
3 This is not very clear, but it seems to mean that if Elias let the land, then he was to pay Thomas a fair rent for it. There is no mention of a rent reserved on Thomas's demise to Elias.
afterwards Elias let the land to another without Alice's consent, she being her father's heir and enfeoffed by him by his lawful charter.
She claims against Elias 13s. 4d. for damages and 6s. 8d. for the affront, and the like against Michael, who took the land from Elias for a term of years, without license. The defendants came and defended by Henry Gangel, their advocate, who did not mention the damages in his answer, neither wholly nor in part. Alice thereupon claimed judgment because the damages and the losses were not mentioned. It is therefore considered that Elias and Michael are in mercy for not pleading as they ought to have done, and that they must pay Alice her damages. Pledge for Elias, William de Notesahe;

Elias 6d. and Michael 18d.

1 COURT at Birton on Sunday, the morrow of S. Laurence [August 10th], in the said year [1275].

Holne.—The inquisition between Thomas Brun, claiming half an acre of land, and Thomas Fernhoule, defendant, comes by Richard del Scoles, Henry at Town-end [ad capud ville], John son of Mary, Alkoc de Wlvedale, Robert de Capella, Reginald de Wlvedale, Matthew del Scoles, Adam Cusyn, Thomas de Wlvedale, John de Eldwardholes, Thomas son of Agge, and Hugh de Lytelwode, who say upon their oath that Adam son of Godyth formerly had by the gift of Godyth his mother 4½ acres of the new land,² and half an acre of the Earl's native land by the gift of Thomas his brother, who was their father's heir, and Adam held those lands for a long time; afterwards, in his great necessity, Adam sold the 4½ acres and another half acre to Richard Aleys, the plaintiff's uncle, and surrendered the land to him in Court, and Richard died vested and seised thereof, without heir of his body. And afterwards came one William, the plaintiff's brother, and paid a relief for that land, and held it. And the said Thomas Fernhoule came, and spoke with Alexander Lucas, the then Steward, for having an inquisition concerning a whole bovate of land, and by that inquisition he got it all excepting that half acre of land which Thomas Brun now claims. And they say that the said Thomas Brun, after the death of his brother William, was the next heir, and that he ought to hold and enjoy that half acre together with the four acres given to him by his mother.³ Thomas Brun is to recover his land and have it in peace, and Thomas Fernhoule is in mercy for the unjust detention. The amercement is condoned because he is poor. Thomas Brun gives 12d. for seisin, doing services and customs, etc.; pledge, Michael de Fouleston.

William de Honle,⁴ 2s. for the escape of three bullocks; pledge, John son of Nicholas de Holne.

Decree.—It is adjudged in the Court at Byrton, held in the church before Alexander Lucas, the then Steward, the whole neighbourhood being present, that if it so happen that any one shall implead another for land or the retention of land, or in any other way, and the person in possession shall have sown it and incurred expenses, and then the other party shall have recovered it, in such case he who has sown the land shall have the crop sown by him and the expenses, and the other shall take his land bare, without having any other assistance.

1 Robert de Harop gives 12d. for license to take a site in Alstanley (which formerly belonged to Richard Dykeler), containing 2 rods in length and 2 rods in breadth,2 from Gilbert de Alstanley, doing services and customs, etc.; pledge, John son of William.

Reyner the Chaplain of Kyrkeleys against Susannah del Brighuses, says that he delivered a heifer into her charge, and that she bled it, whereby it was damaged to the amount of 2s.; she also insulted him with bad words, in order to make him angry, calling him a lazy little man, to his damage, etc. Susannah comes and denies the whole of it, word by word, and puts herself on an inquisition. The inquisition comes by the whole township of Brighuses, and says that it is true that Susannah drew blood from the heifer, but that it was not damaged thereby, nor was Reyner, but they know nothing of any bad words nor of any violence. Reyner and his pledges are in mercy for a false claim. The fine is condoned at the instance of William, the officer of York.

1 Page 72.
2 Rods is used both for a rod, lineal measure, and a rood, square measure. The piece of land in question was 11 yards square.
3 Probably a former Steward.
It was presented that Thomas son of Richard de Coppeley took an acre of land from Hugh de Stancliff, according to an agreement first made between them. He comes and admits it, and gives 12d. for license to take the land, doing services and customs, etc.

The inquisition taken touching the townships of Staynland, Barkesland, Fekesby, and Bothemley, as to a hue raised in the neighbourhood, namely, which of them raised it, against whom, and for what cause. The inquisition comes, and says on oath that on the Wednesday before the Chair of Peter [February 22nd] certain men, by the consent, advice and order of John de Eland, came into the fee of the Earl of Warren at Staynland, and there seized two beasts, and took them to Eland, within the fee of the Earl of Lincoln, and kept them until the third hour of the next day, when they were delivered up by means of Thomas del Slac, the grave of John de Querneby; and not being pleased at this, there came John Pudding and Hudde the Grave, and others, on the Wednesday in the first week of Lent, into the fee of the Earl of Warren where the people of Staynland were assembled at their ploughs, seeking to take their cattle in distress for 6s. 8d. which John de Querneby had promised to the said John [de Eland] as an aid towards making his eldest son a knight, and they took the cattle away beyond the boundaries of [the fee of] John, Earl of Warren, and there they [the cattle] remained. In the meantime came John de Eland, Roger de Heleyes, Hugh son of the said John [de Eland], Ralph de Moscroft, and others, with force and arms, and they beat, wounded, and ill-treated the people of the Earl of Warren there found, against the peace, and took from them and retained a bow worth 2d. and 10 arrows worth 4d. And when the Earl of Warren’s men perceived that John, Roger, and the other men of the aforesaid Earl [of Lincoln] began to shoot, they raised the hue and cry against them. Perceiving this, John and Roger carried off the cattle, and sent them back to Staynland, from which place they departed and drove the cattle to Norlaund, in his [?John de Eland’s] fee, and there the cattle remained until they were delivered up by means of John de Ravenesfeud, Bailiff of the Earl [of Warren]. Therefore, etc.

1 Page 73.
2 Facatur, in the singular, probably refers to John de Eland.
3 Presumably at Stainland.
The inquisition taken touching a merlin's nest in Hyperum, which was lost and stolen, comes by the whole township of Northouerum, and says that this year a merlin's nest was found in Bynsrode, and the fact was made known to the Chief Forester, Thomas de la Garderobe, and on his view it was delivered in charge to John de Stanclyf, the Grave of Hyperum, whereupon he became responsible for it; and while it was in his charge, the nest was stolen, and so lost. And a contention arose between the Forester and the Grave as to which of them ought to have charge when the nest of a sparrow-hawk or other fowl was found, and this was referred to the inquisition. Which came, and said on oath that when a nest is found in any wood in the neighbourhood, the Forester is bound to appoint and assign someone to have charge of it, while the Grave ought to pay the costs and expenses of the care of the nest out of the Earl's moneys. It is therefore considered that John de Stanclyf be in mercy, he having been in charge of the nest by delivery from the Forester, and the nest having been lost through his neglect, and that he do pay the Earl at his pleasure for the value of the nest and the birds, at his next coming. He made fine of 6d.

William and the other defendants came and denied the whole of it, word by word, and put themselves on an inquisition of the neighbourhood. Which comes by Roger del Helm, Henry de

It is therefore considered that the defendants, for their wrong-doing, and for denying the presentation and their assent to it, be in mercy, and that they do pay the plaintiffs their damages. Pledges for the damages and the amercement, the one for the other. They make fine of 10s. They must also contribute equally to the fine previously paid by the plaintiffs, as though they had been originally co-defendants with them.

They say altogether that they know of no one guilty of the matters presented, but that all these are good and true men. Therefore nothing is done therein.

COURT at Rastrik, the Monday following, in the year abovesaid, etc. [1297].

Hiperum.—Gilbert del Both against Richard le Bagger claiming a debt of 5s. 10½d. The defendant says that he paid it to the plaintiff and his son John in money and goods. This is borne out by an inquisition. He therefore goes quit, and Gilbert is fined 25. Pledge, William del Both.

Thomas the Webster against Alcok le Waynwrith, says that on Sunday, the Octave of Easter Day, he was going along the high road, or a pathway where he had perfect right to go, with a horse-load of bread, towards Halifax Church, when Alcok came and stopped the way, taking his hood, which he still retains; and meanwhile his horse ran off with the bread, which fell and broke, so that out of 3s. worth, only 1s. worth was left. Alcok says that the plaintiff was going across a field sown with rye [siligo], where he had no right to be. The inquisition says that the plaintiff did go into a sown field, which was not prohibited, and that Adam wrongfully took a pledge. Alcok must satisfy the plaintiff, and is fined 6d.; pledges, Hanne le Pinder and William de Hiperum.

William del Bothen complains of William de Hiperum, and says that he owes 20d. for a certain tithe [?] sold to him [de quadam deo sibi vendita], and that he called him a usurer. The defendant denies the debt, and must wage his law. And as to calling him a usurer, the defendant says that he gave the plaintiff 12d. to have respite of a debt of 10s. which he owed for a certain tithe [\textit{pro quodam dec^{a}}]. The plaintiff admits the payment of the 12d., but says that he allowed it as the first payment for the said tithe [?]. He must therefore wage his law. Gilbert and John his brother admit that they were pledges, but for a mark only; and they say that when they were distrained for the said debt, the principal debtor entered his chattels and delivered their chattels, wherefore they hold they ought to go quit. John son of John de Haldewrth makes fine of 2s. for default of suit of Court.

Spinetum.—Clarice widow of Hugh against Ivo the Smith, claims one-third of an acre of land, as her dower. Ivo says she ought not to have dower therein, because she is free and not a villein [nativa], neither does she reside in the Earl's fee. He may hold in peace, and she is in mercy for a false claim. The fine is pardoned because she has nothing in goods.

Alvirthorpe.—Alice de Alvirthorpe against Ed[usa], daughter of Richard Broun, says that she holds an acre of land which belongs to the inheritance of herself and her sisters, because Agnes, their mother, sold it after their father's death. The defendant says that Hugh, their father, sold the land, and not Agnes, their mother. They refer to an inquisition of the neighbours, viz:—Alexander Waltheuf, Peter le Peddere, John Malin, Thomas Peger, Ralph de Lapesheved, Ralph de Colleye, Thomas son of Hawe, John the Smith, William Attebarre, William Proudfot, Roger son of Alote, and William son of Thomas, who say on their oath that Hugh de Alvirthorpe sold the land to Richard Estrild and his heirs for ever, who sold it to Gerbot de Alvirthorpe and his heirs, from whom Edusa has entry. Let her hold in peace. Alice is fined 6d. for a false claim.

Spinetum.—Malina Lyleman against Philip Wlf claims a third of a rood of meadow, in dower, which was demised by her late husband, William Lileman, to the defendant. Sandale.—Marg[ery] del Hill of Criegeliston withdraws her suit against Robert Estrild, who therefore goes quit. Her fine is forgiven because she is poor.
STANLEY.—Robert Estrild complains of Simon de Monte of Stanley in a plea of land; pledge, German Phylecok; he says that he carried off, against the bailiff’s prohibition, the crop of an acre of land sown with rye [siligo] in the 24th year, and the crop of an acre of land sown with oats in the 25th year, worth 1 s. The defendant says that he acquired the land in the presence of Peter de Lundo, the Steward. The rolls are to be searched.

ALVIRTHORPE.—Peter le Peddere against Richard son of Philip, for calling him a thief. Richard acknowledges it, and is to make satisfaction; fine 3d.; pledge, Henry del Bothem.

Maude, widow of Gerbot, complains of Ed[usa] daughter of Richard Broun; pledge, Philip the Grave. The plaintiff claims her third, as dower, in 11 acres of land now held by the defendant, of which Gerbot, her husband, died vested and seised. The defendant says that Gerbot de Alvirthorpe, the plaintiff’s late husband, surrendered the said land to John, his son, before he married the said Maude, and John surrendered the land to her [the defendant] in open Court. They refer to an inquisition of the neighbours, viz:—Ralph de Colley, John the Smith, Peter le Pedder, Alexander Waltheu, Thomas Peger, John Malin, Simon de Monte, Adam de Uchethorpe, Philip de Mora, Robert son of Walter, Richard the Grave of Ossete, and Philip the Grave, who say on their oath that Gerbot de Alvirthorpe surrendered the 11 acres to John Schirloc, his son (in open Court, before Alexander Lucas, Steward), to him and his heirs for ever, and John surrendered it again to Gerbot for his life, so that Gerbot had nothing in it but a life estate. The defendant is therefore to hold in peace, and Maude is fined 6d. for a false claim. She also pays 6d. for agreeing with Richard Gerbot in a plea of land, without license.

SPINETUM.—Margery wife of Elias le Grete complains of John Monke, for trespass; pledge, William de Castelforth.

The sworn bailiff presents that Thomas de Hopton, Richard his brother, and Adam son of John Fox, entered the Earl's liberty at Schelf, and there seized a man by night, and ill-treated him, and forcibly carried him off against his will from the Earl's liberty into the Earl of Lincoln's liberty.
